Backstory

Beneath the unwavering gaze of a full moon, I drew my first breath. Crystalline spires, rising defiantly from the desert's embrace, bore silent witness. Here, in this city of mirrors and secrets, my destiny was etched.

While others sought solace in fleeting moments of joy, my days were claimed by ancient knowledge and relentless discipline. Tutors, their eyes heavy with the burdens of lost realms, schooled me in the shadows and wonders lurking just beyond the veil of reality. And while children danced under the moonlight's caress, I wrestled with ethereal forces. I felt an innate potential surging within, a promise that one day, my fingers would weave patterns powerful enough to challenge and reshape the very fabric of existence.

The legacy of the Ecthëlions whispered its weighty expectations, an ever-present echo in my every step. Though born of noble blood, the warmth of my parents' embrace was a tale I knew only from secondhand whispers. Their lives, so intertwined with the affairs of realms and realities beyond, left little room for the son who walked among them.

In the heart of this maze of reflections, surrounded by the weight of ancient legacies, my resolve was forged. The arcane became more than just gestures and incantations; it was the very essence of my being. To many, my words seemed ensnared in cryptic mysteries, but to me, they were the desperate utterances of one who has peered into the abyss and felt its chilling stare in return.

As night's mantle enveloped the city, I felt the pull of a deeper, darker purpose. Beneath the very stars that witnessed my birth, a burning resolve kindled. I would harness the boundless powers of the cosmos, pit ancient evil against eldritch horrors, and in the crucible of that apocalyptic clash, eradicate the scourge of malevolence.

For within the vast expanse of the universe's enigmas, one truth was irrefutable: I was destined to be its instrument of reckoning.
